The barn of Silas D. Reynolds in Carlton, in the campground was struck by lightning last Wednesday night, and burned with all its contents, consisting of about fifty tons of hay and a quantity of farming tools. Loss $1,200. Insurance $600.

A movement has been inaugurated in our village (Carlton) for the establishment of a National Bank. We learn that the enterprise is receiving encouragement, $1,000 having been subscribed here in a day or two. Our section is in need of a bank which would greatly facilitate business and our principal village, by united efforts, can easily raise the necessary amount.—Key to Item

Charles Jordan a travelling clothier of North Windham, met with a serious accident at Naples recently. His horse ran away and completely demolished the cart. Mr. Jordan's left leg was broken. He also sustained internal injuries from which he will not soon recover.

Mr. Henry J. Furber, a Chicago million dollar graduate of the class of 1854, was recently in Portland, and, at the suggestion of Prof. Johnson who has charge of the valuable art collection, though entirely without solicitation, gave orders that one of the empty panels on the south wall of the Chapel should be filled at his expense by the best talent the country can afford. The subject though not fully decided on, will be from the Old Testament. No definite arrangements have yet been made as to the artist. Mr. Frederick Lathrop, was the artist first employed on a similar task.

Tuesday afternoon as a train was passing through Commercial street, Portland, towards the Grand Trunk station a man weighing approximately some 250 pounds, attempted to jump from the train next to the locomotive, when their speed had reached a point midway between Custom House and Franklin wharves. Instead of jumping with the train he stepped off as if descending a flight of stairs. He had a large heavy overcoat on, and a bologna sausage under the other. As his feet touched the ground he went head over end like a tenpin, leaving a paying stone. Men rushed to him and picked him up. He was stunned for a few minutes and had quite a gash cut in his head. A hack was procured and he was sent to the train, declining to have any doctor called. He said he belonged in New Hampshire but declined to furnish his name. It was a narrow escape from serious injury.

Mr. D. J. Trask belonging in Hallowell was taken to the Charlton Street House in Boston, Sunday being probably insane. She reported at station two that she had lost money and other valuables.

A Winthrop correspondent writes in connection with the fire in the woolen mill, Monday forenoon, "It is safe to say that had it not been for our water works we can't put in the greater part of the business portion of our village, including the mills, would now be in ashes."

On the night of Tuesday the 18th inst. it was rifled at the door of Nelson Benson of South Gardiner and after making inquiries and finding that there were no more round the premises retired determined to go in. He asked for a number of water and Mrs. Bennett went and got him a glass, and at the same time her husband's revolver. The tramp would not use the glass when offered him, but said that he was going in, and started towards the door. Upon this Mrs. Bennett aimed the revolver at his feet and fired, and he immediately ran away. It is not known whether he was injured or not. It maps have been very thick in that neighborhood this season.

Waldo

A valuable young horse belonging to a clergyman in Cornish, was stolen from his pasture in that town, Sunday evening. The thieves were tracked to the Eastern railroad station in Sebago where the trail was lost.

Saturday night, about midnight, Officer Small of Saco, discovered a man in a cottage owned by George Cutler at Ferry beach. He immediately arrested the fellow. Monday morning he was taken before Judge Emmons, plead guilty of being a tramp and was fined $20 and costs, but in default of payment City Marshal Littlefield took him to the Portland work house for four months.

Bert, a young son of E. Lane, of Saco, met with a mishap Saturday afternoon, which came near ending his life. He was bathing in the river at Saco, and ventured out too far in the water. He could swim but a few strokes and lost his head and began to sink, when a boy saw him and dashed into the water and rescued him.

Frelinghuysen-Coats

HIGH TIDE WEDDING AT THE CAREY VILLA, NEWPORT—THE FLORIST'S ART EXHAUSTED IN ELABORATE DECORATION.

Tuesday afternoon occurred one of the most noteworthy weddings of which Newport has been the scene in many years. The contracting parties were Theodore Frelinghuysen, son of the late Secretary of State, and Miss Alice Coats, daughter of James Coats of Providence, of the firm of J. & P. Coats, the great thread manufacturers of Scotland. The wedding took place at the handsome Carey villa on Narragansett avenue, occupied this season by the bride's parents. Owing to the recent death of the bridegroom's distinguished father, the guests included only the immediate relatives and intimate friends of the two families. Among the friends present were ex-President Arthur, Hon. George Bancroft, Judge and Mrs. Davis, Miss Lucy Frelinghuysen, Mr. and Mrs. John N. A. Griswold, Mrs. G. Griswold Gray, Mrs. J. W. Haven, Edgar Auchincloss and family and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Auchincloss.

The veranda and interior of the villa were elaborately decorated. Each side of the hallway was heavily garlanded with flowers and foliage. In the centre was a pyramid of blue and white hydrangeas. Upward spread the oak branches in graceful profusion over the great staircase, shielding and out with branch and leaf till they joined the clumps of foliage in the hallways above. These rooms were freshened by a profusion of foliage and flowers, the circular windows being quite surrounded with china asters. In the hallway below, on a massive oak sideboard was a tiny tropical garden.

Entering the room at the right of the foot of the stairs one came upon one of Pinard's costliest collations in dainty dishes of cut glass and silver. In the parlor hung Japanese fans filled with pink and white sweet peas, while interspersed were large fans of palm leaves bearing designs in rich clusters of flowers of many colors. These joined near the mantelpiece in a bank of yellow flowers of the aloin in design and form. At each side of the doorway leading to the lawn were two fine sets of palms, whose feathery leaves swept the high ceilings and formed a waving archway, while the corners were filled with huge Australian tree ferns. Adjoining the hall and parlor is the library, which was also decorated in rich colors.

MASSES OF FOLIAGE

concealed the corners and screened the fireplace, over which rose a profusion of gloxinias in full flower. The large mirror opposite was flanked by large tropical plants while heavy garlands of La France roses, interspersed here and there with clusters of white sweet peas, swayed gently over its face. This decoration of the next parlor, adjoining the library and the hall was in the style of Louis XIV. Its ground colors were white and gold and the floral decoration was accordingly lighter in color than in the rooms adjoining. The doorways were partially screened by vines and clusters of grapes. The window was a mass of orchids. Salmon pink gladiolus rose out of a thick bed on the mantel up about the mirrors, and drooped into the lofty fireplace below, while there fell over all its feathery lines the Japanese asparagus plumosus vine.

The entrance to the apartment in which the marriage ceremony was performed was hung with vines. One was quite dazzled on entering with the beauty of floral decorations that have been Hodson's constant work for a week past. The walls are thickly hung with oil paintings, and form a rich background. At the right, over the mass of plants screening the fireplace was a splendid mantelpiece of green foliage, with clusters delicate color about the mirror above, bringing out in beautiful relief the golden palms, gloxinias and passiflora princeps swinging in graceful garland over its face. Feathery palms stretched in delicate masses upward from the corners, gathering in antique bits of decoration about the pictures and floral pieces. Opposite the doorway rose a dome of tropical foliage. Banks of rich green moss and fine plants formed the base of the living green walls, which brought out in a striking way a chime of marriage bells depending from the pink and white of sweet peas. The bells were of pink and white flowers of many kinds in many designs, and the bell ropes were with pink and white china silk sashes which dropped in beautiful shining bands to the screen behind. Great palms rose at either side of the entrance and threw their brilliancy over the archway.

At the end of the hall was the conservatory, screened from view by hanging baskets, trailing vines and a large floral piece of many hues that swung gently back and forth in the breeze. Hence came delightful strains from Mullaly's orchestra of Boston, as the bridal party took its places in the assembly beneath the floral dome.

was performed by Rev. Hutchins Tryon, D.D., the venerable ex-pastor of the United Congregational Church of this city and the bride was given away by her father. Fred Frelinghuysen, brother of the groom was best man, and the two Misses Coats, sisters of the bride, were the bride's maids. The ushers were Hugh D. Auchincloss and Pennington Whitehead.

The material of which the bridal dress was made was white silk mull, covered with Valenciennes lace. The corsage was cut low and elegantly trimmed with this lace, which also formed the trimming for the bridal veil and dainty hand kerchief. The bridal veil, in addition to gem ornaments was prettily decorated with sprigs and blossoms of Scotch heather. Diamonds and pearls were the gems used in ornament.

Mrs. Coats wore a mauve watered silk, with drapery of duchesse lace and bows of royal purple velvet. The bride's maids were attired in dresses of white silk mull in striped gauze, made decollette their ornaments consisting chiefly of necklaces of large silver beads. The sisters of the bridegroom, Miss Frelinghuysen and Mrs. John Davis, stood near during the ceremony, the former dressed in white silk mull and the latter in white crepe.

After the ceremony and when about to start on the wedding tour, the bride wore a tailor-made travelling dress of black and white check. The wedded pair visit Lenox to greet Mrs. Frelinghuysen who being an invalid was unable to be present at the ceremony on Saturday they will sail on the Cunard for Scotland, with a protracted tour of Europe in view.

The wedding presents were not shown, but they are known to have been numerous and elegant.

Settled the Case.

ALLEGED MISMANAGEMENT OF SCHOONER SATELLITE OF BATH

[Biddeford Journal.]

In April 1882 Mr. Solon S. Andrews, of Biddeford, was engaged under a government contract in excavating and removing Gangway Rocks, a sunken ledge, opposite the navy yard, and nearly in the middle of Piscataqua river, between Kittery and Portsmouth. There was fifteen feet depth of water over the ledge at low water.

In order to carry on his submarine blasting and diving, the contractor had a structure located and moored upon the ledge, the same being four long, heavy timbers, the lower ends resting on the ledge, and the upper parts projecting high up out of the water. To these timbers, at each of the four corners, a platform of timber and plank was attached by wide iron straps in such a manner that the platform could be raised or lowered, according as the ebb and flow of the tide made it necessary and convenient in carrying on the work.

On the up river side of this structure, a series of steel and iron railroad rails formed a screen to break the force of the current of the ebb tide, which ran at this point five or six knots per hour, and in its shelter the divers could work at the bottom of the river on the ledge. Alongside of this structure, a sloop upon which the divers and workmen lived, was moored.

The P. S. & P. railroad bridge across the Piscataqua river, is located about three-fourths of a mile above Gangway Rock. Capt. Josiah M. Aderton, of Kittery, was master of the schooner Satellite of Bath, engaged in freighting bricks from Dover to Boston. The schooner, then loaded, on the morning of the 28th of April, was moored at the bridge mentioned, and was got under way about five o'clock, and proceeded down river.

At first there was some breeze, but when about half way down to the gangway the master found the breeze was beginning to die away, that he was losing control of the vessel, and he headed her for the Portsmouth side, although the main ship channel was on the Kittery side.

Soon after he found the wind had died away, he dropped his anchors, but either because he did not pay out enough chain or for some other cause, his anchors failed to hold, and the vessel quickly drifted down the stream and struck heavily against Andrews' structure, doing considerable injury, but receiving none herself, swinging round down the stream with the current, she brought up with one of her anchors upon one of the moorings of the sloop. This mooring was cut and the schooner drifted down stream, Andrews losing an anchor.

Andrews' damages amounted to several hundred dollars. Capt. Aderton declined to give anything because he said the collision was the result of an inevitable accident, and was not caused by any negligence in the management of the schooner.

Andrews sued Aderton in the Supreme Judicial Court in York county, in an action on the case for damages arising from his alleged negligent management of the schooner, and a jury at the trial last January at Saco returned a verdict in favor of Aderton. Andrews' counsel then filed a motion to have the verdict set aside on the ground that it was against the law and the evidence in the case and the case went to the Law court, but was never argued. Soon after the verdict, Andrews concluded to try again in another way, and therefore entered a libel in the District Court of the United States at Portland against the schooner Sat Elite, but not against the master and the court issued process, upon which the vessel was attached and her owners bonded her. Capt. Aderton came into court as claimant of the vessel, and by his counsel moved that the libel be dismissed because another action for the same cause was pending in the State court, but the court held that the pending of the other suit was no bar in this case.

The captain then filed his answer to the libel, alleging that the case was not one of admiralty jurisdiction because, among other things, the structure injured was not a vessel engaged in commerce and on navigable water, but a structure in the water, resting on the bottom of the river used for another purpose. At the hearing it was claimed in his behalf that an injury to such a structure caused by the collision of a vessel in the river, was like an injury to a bridge which is not a common tort, the remedy for which is not within the jurisdiction of the admiralty court, but must be sought in a court of common law.

The judge of the district court found as facts that Andrews structure was in deep water near the middle of a wide public navigable river, within the ebb and flow of the tide which vessels were accustomed to navigate, and that there was room enough for other craft for vessels to pass, and that he was lawfully engaged in improving the facilities for the navigation of those waters. That the master of the Satellite worked too long before he attempted to anchor, and that he did not have chain enough overboard and after casting his anchor did not continue to pay out chain as he might have done, whereby he might possibly have brought the schooner up in season to have saved the collision since the last foot of chain might have been sufficient. The court held that the test of the admiralty jurisdiction of the territorial courts was locality. That the structure which Andrews had moored upon the ledge, its use, its quality were such that the District Court had jurisdiction and further held that inevitable accident was not proven, but on the contrary that the master was guilty of negligence in the management of the schooner and ordered a decree to be entered in favor of the libelant for the amount of his damages.

From this decree Aderton filed the bond and appealed to the Circuit Court. In the Payson judicial term it was second entered by libelant. Each of the litigants upon the same evidence had won and lost before their respective courts. The Circuit Court ordered to Andrews satisfactory amends for his damages and both cases were settled.

Hon. M. T. Hunt was counsel for Andrews. Hon. W. E. Hogan of Bath was counsel for Aderton in the State Court, and Hon. Thomas B. Reed in the District Court.

Dr Loring's Reply

TO COMPTROLLER HUNTING'S ALLEGED ERROR.

SALEM, Aug. 21, 1885.

Sir—Years of Age 14th inst. received. Allow me to correct a slight clerical error in the quotation you make from my letter of July 27th. The third line of quote, and which portion I now present in its exact words.

It was with this view of the matter that I applied the appropriation made June 6th, 1884 under the head of "Laboratory and necessary expenses" in conducting experiments in the manufacture of sugar from sorghum and other native plants.

I have expended this appropriation for the purchase of machinery, for the purchase and distribution of seeds of sugar producing plants, for services of investigators, in chemical analyses and in manufacturing, all for the purpose of carrying out the object of the statute. All the items of my accounts which I learn from your letter of June 17th 1885 are disallowed, were expended by me in conducting the experiments provided for.

This statement you interpret to be an assertion on my part that the expenditures for the purchase of machinery had been disallowed by you. I intended, however, to state merely that what I expended of the $50,000 appropriated June 5th, 1884 for "laboratory and experiments in manufacture of sugar" were expended in the purchase of machinery, seeds, services of investigators, chemical analyses and manufacturing, and that I laid them before the experiments in the manufacture of sugar.

I did not intend to state that any of my payments for machinery had been disallowed—for they had not been. I intended to state that the disallowed items, amounting to $26,307.63, were expended by me in conducting the experiments provided for, and in my view of the law which has been adopted by the government up to the rendering of the account now disallowed this statement is no error.

I claim that the purchase of seed and sorghum seeds and the employment of labor for their distribution were as much a part of the experimental expenditure as the purchase of machinery, and that without knowledge of the crops to be obtained from the variety of seeds, the machinery would be of no use and no valuable experiment could be conducted. I claim that seed, labor, laboratory work and machinery were all needed to try experiments in the sugar manufacture contemplated by Congress, and that each and all of them were contemplated by Congress when it made the appropriation.

I regret that my phraseology should have been in any way obscure, and trust I have now made my meaning clear. I am confident you will not for a moment suspect me of attempting to mislead the case either to yourself or the public. I am endeavoring to maintain the position I have taken because I think it is just and right.

Very respectfully,

GEORGE B. LORING.

Hon. M. J. Durham, First Comptroller Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.

Whig and Courier.

BOUTELLE & BURR, PROPRIETORS.

C. A. BOUTELLE, Editor.

All business letters should be addressed to Boutelle & Burr, and communications intended for publication should be addressed "Editor of Whig and Courier."

FRIDAY, AUGUST 22, 1885.

The number of children of school age enrolled in the United States is estimated at 11,000,000.

Senator Voorhees is credited with the appointment of C. R. Faulkner to be Chief of the Record Division of the Pension Office; yet he once said of him "Ye gods! you ought to see his spelling."

Hon. J. Warren Keifer, representing a syndicate of Ohio capitalists, has just purchased a tract of some thousands of acres of farming land at Ellsworth, Kan., including the site of old Fort Harker.

Senators Morgan and Pugh, of Alabama, have been unable to appease the appetite for office in that State and the disappointed seekers are making grave threats of what they will do when the next election for United States Senator comes around.

The movement of the Republicans of East Tennessee towards perfecting their organization is the first step in the plan which contemplates similar action in the middle and western parts of the State and the placing of the party on a firm foundation.

A writer in the Piscataquis Observer very strenuously objects to the term "loot" as applied by another writer to the seizing of the postoffices by the Democratic party. Did he never hear of the famous Democratic slogan: "To the victors belong the spoils"?

The Commercial evinces much anxiety for us to express an opinion about the appointment of a municipal judge at Gardiner, who it declares to be "as much under a cloud" as the notorious Mr. Dunton. When we learn anything to the detriment of the character of the judge mentioned we shall be ready to express an opinion, but up to this time we have only some very vague insinuations in Democratic newspapers. What does the Commercial charge against that officer?

The New Age approvingly copies the squib of the Aroostook, in which it intimates that the editor of THE WHIG having served during the rebellion on "a gunboat," was as safe from disaster as if on a yacht. Editor Plaisted ought to be an expert on safe locations in time of war, but if he had served on some "gunboats" that we have in mind there could hardly have arisen so much dispute a few years ago as to whether he had ever been under fire.

Some of the Cleveland organs are trying to make a little political capital out of the announcement that one P. H. Dowling, of Toledo, Ohio, an alleged Republican, has sworn allegiance to the Administration. At the best the party is hard pushed when it seizes upon this alleged change of heart on the part of an obscure individual as demonstrating a popular movement in favor of the Administration, but when it is known that the aforesaid Dowling is a postmaster bidding for a new lease of official life, the whole thing becomes ridiculous.

Immediately after the appointment of Troup as Collector of Internal Revenue in Connecticut, some of the Mugwump papers sought to make a great handle of the announcement that he proposed to retain the old and efficient deputies, and pointed to it as evidence that Troup was not a thoroughly bad fellow after all. Now that Troup is laying his plans to remove these same deputies and has, in fact, already asked for the resignation of two of them, it will be interesting to note the apology those papers will frame to cover this particular case.

Referring to the summary removal of the postmaster at Orono, the Commercial wishes us to inform it "upon what grounds Mr. White was 'turned in' which will not equally justify the appointment of Mr. Donigan." We take pleasure in affording our contemporary the information that Mr. White was appointed in accordance with the wishes of a large majority of the business men and other citizens of Orono to whom he has given eminent satisfaction as postmaster. Does the Commercial pretend that there has been any such popular demand for his removal and the appointment of another person?

If the President glances over the newspaper extracts relating to the Administration that have accumulated during his sojourn in the woods, he will find the following significant paragraph from that staunch Democratic organ, the New York World: "It is just as well, perhaps, that President Cleveland is not going out to Ohio to impart a gingery aspect to the Democratic canvass. There are people out there who might feel disposed to inquire: 'How about Mr. Thurman?' The fact that Mr. Thurman has been overlooked by the Administration is not pleasing to nine-tenths of the Democratic voters of Ohio. And the same may be said of the whole country."

The First Assistant Postmaster General remarks "that it is impracticable to attempt any investigation of charges against incumbents; that the officer charged with the appointment of a whole army of fourth-class postmasters must entrust to some one else the task of investigating each case, and that under existing circumstances he had better accept the recommendation of Democratic Congressmen wherever possible." Mr. Stevenson has already manifested his contempt of the President's pledges of adherence to civil service reform by wholesale removals among fourth-class postmasters for political reasons, and now he snaps his fingers under the noses of the Mugwumps and says that the Democratic Congressmen should be entrusted with the investigation of all so-called charges against men whose places they desire for their own friends.

The Secretary of the Navy undoubtedly intends to work his position for all it is worth in the coming campaigns, in spite of the fact that he is a part of this so-called "reform" Administration. The Tribune says: "Unless there is politics, and bad politics at that, somewhere about it, the new order at the Brooklyn Navy Yard is not easily understood. The lists of employes in the different shops, it is directed, shall not be shown to any one. If the new employes are not chosen for political reasons and in violation of the law regulating appointments, what is there about the matter to conceal?"

Not to Be Winked out of Sight.

Our evening contemporary, which has always been an eager champion of the State Steal, is very much shocked because we have called attention to the illegal manner in which the Cleveland Administration is rewarding the perpetrators of the infamous Counting-Out frauds in Maine, the latest recognition of that peculiarly Democratic service being the appointment of the widow of one of the Garcelon Council as postmaster at Presque Isle. The Commercial also has a remarkably knowing correspondent — perhaps another of the notorious conspirators — who hastens to inform that paper that the appointment not only "creates great satisfaction in Aroostook County," but that the feeling of delight "is general in this Congressional district." As the appointment was first announced only twenty-four hours before this remarkable correspondent wrote his letter, the rapidity with which he has canvassed the sentiment of "Aroostook County" and "this Congressional District," eclipses any previous achievement in that line.

The attempt of our contemporary to avoid the issue in this business by blustering about an assault upon a lady, is altogether too flimsy to succeed. We have made no complaint against the lady, who may be a most estimable person, but our criticism is that a Federal office is given to her because of what her husband did in the conspiracy that so nearly plunged our State into bloodshed, and that will stand as a black disgrace upon the conspirators and the party that encouraged them. If there is any other reason for this appointment than as a part of the "cyclodicting" process that has bestowed important United States offices upon Pillsbury, Tabulator Chase, Simon Brown and others of the Garcelon confederates, let it be stated. Meanwhile we shall continue to protest, however unavailingly, for the present, against the prostitution of the civil service of the National Government to reward and honor the perpetrators of the most atrocious crime against the purity of the suffrage ever attempted outside of the Solid South.

The New York Republicans have disconcerted the Democrats by their decision to hold their Convention in advance of the opposition, as it shows a disposition to take the lead in the contest from the very start, and a spirit of vigorous determination that augurs well for success. The World says: "It is evident that the Republicans of this State mean to make a lively fight. The State Committee at Saratoga yesterday fixed upon the 22d of September as the date of the State Convention and Saratoga the place. Thus the Democratic Convention, which which meets at Saratoga on the 24th, will come upon the rear guard of the enemy. It was generally supposed that the Republicans would hold their Convention a few days later than the Democrats with a view to taking advantage of mistakes. But they boldly declare a desire to be first in the field."

The Washington Capital says "Senator Logan's handsome home out on Columbia Heights, at the corner of Thirteenth and Clifton streets, is almost ready for occupancy. It is the place known as the Old Stone Mansion, and for it the Senator paid $20,000, with five years to pay it in. The house is large, cool, convenient, and handsome. Though built years ago, it is well preserved. The foundations are as solid as rock, and everything about the place is substantial. There is about an acre and a half of ground, and the view of the city from the porch, which is open to all the southern breezes, is one of the handsomest to be obtained from any point on the Heights. Mrs. Logan has selected all the furniture, and when she and the General return in October they will move in. During the winter they expect to entertain quite extensively."

The Hon. Gibson Atherton was nominated for the Supreme Court bench by the Ohio Democratic State Convention to succeed the late Judge Oakey and was thereupon appointed by the Governor to the same position, pending the election in October. In a speech to his friends and constituents, at Newark, the night after the convention, he is described as drawing his commission from his pocket and as saying while holding it aloft: "I repeat that I am under many obligations to the gentlemen who worked for my nomination. From this document you can see that I am not only a Supreme Court Judge expectant, but one in reality. If my friends have any cases on which they need favorable action bring them before me." If this remark was made, as is claimed, only in jest, it would still indicate a very dull sense of propriety on the part of a just appointed Judge on the Supreme Bench.

An Ohio Democrat has given to a Washington Star reporter his opinion of the political outlook in that State. He said: "Hoadly's renomination was not a compliment to him, nor was it intended as such. His Administration has not been popular even with his own party. The last Legislature was a disgrace to the party and to the State. Votes were bought and sold and its acts of omission and of commission shamed the people. Now nobody else wanted to take the field and the task of defending Hoadly's Administration and the Legislature which served with it. The party concluded to let Mr. Hoadly defend his own Administration. It was decent right and proper that he should do so. Hence he was renominated practically without opposition. I believe our folks will pay more attention to the Legislative fight than to the State ticket. I expect to see the State ticket sacrificed wherever votes for Democratic candidates for the Legislature can be gained thereby. If we can get the Legislature Thurman will be sent to the Senate unanimously, and then we will have a leader in that body who can aid the Democratic Administration. But I can tell you this much, it is idle, at present, to speculate upon the outcome in Ohio. Nobody can tell what the Prohibition vote will be. It is well understood among the Democrats that this is Sherman's fight, and they know that means plenty of money for the Republicans."

The Milwaukee Sentinel says: The felon who committed Democratic election outrages in Cincinnati, and for whose crimes there is no excuse, has been pardoned at the solicitation of Governor Hoadly, Minister Pendleton, Ex-governor Bishop and Representative Follett. These are the Democrats who "impose" upon the President—the shining lights of the Democracy and one of them the idol of the Mugwumps. "Democracy and reform" was the cry last year.

Nothing could be meaner than Pension Commissioner Black's insinuation that Miss Pension Agent Sweet is acting illegally in not dropping names from the pension rolls, says the Lowell Courier, except the Mugwump backing which Black goes in his contemptible little dodge for getting an excuse to violate the principles of civil service reform.

Congressman Berlah Wilkins, of Ohio, has made himself the envy of all other Democratic Congressmen by getting twenty-four postmasters appointed in one day, without making any charges against the incumbents other than that they were Republicans.

The Washington Post, a prominent Democratic organ, is disgusted at the Ohio Democratic platform. Referring to the entire absence of any commendation of civil service reform the Post says: "The depressing dead level of insensibility and wrongheadedness remains undisturbed even by the faintest ripple. It is not in order to say that the Ohio Democrats are doomed to certain defeat. In saying that they deserve it, we say all the occasion justifies."

Muzzling the Press.

[Philadelphia Press.]

If the correspondent of the New York World is not in error, President Cleveland has been guilty of an attempt to fetter the whole press of the United States. "Where I go," said the President, "let no vulgar correspondent or representative trend." In the furtherance of this Democratic sentiment, an arrangement was made with the proprietor of the Prospect House at Saranac Lake that no newspaper representative should be permitted to engage rooms there. Of course the World enters a protest against that being held out at arm's length by the President of its own choice. "The press and the public," it says, "are kept at arm's length." And, moreover, it discovers in this indignity against newspaper men a resemblance to the "olivine hedge fences" which encircle the "temporarily peripatetic potentates of Europe when they make the Summer round of their country palaces."

And this is Democratic simplicity. Does President Cleveland consider himself a great European potentate that no newspaper dare may sleep under the same roof that shelters him? Has the public no right to know what time he rises, which foot he first puts on the floor, the temperature of his bath, the brand of his shaving soap, the make of his razors? Again, are we to be kept in total ignorance of his daily consumption of food, and are we to learn nothing of the results of his frequent fishing expeditions?

No, the World is right. We want none of the methods of the effete and tottering monarchies of Europe in this Western Republic of ours, and the sooner President Cleveland realizes this the better for himself. Though the hat of the average newspaper man may be a trifle worn, and his gripsack may not be a thing of beauty, he demands the right to hang the one in the hall side by side with that of the President's, and the right to slam the other on the counter of any country inn with the assurance that no semi-monarch has a right to assume that he has come to pry into his privacy.

We are heartily in accord with our esteemed contemporary, the World, in the noble fight it is making against the introduction of the methods of Russia into the Democratic party, and we hope it will succeed.

TO THE POINT.

Look here, friend! How often must you be reminded of the fact that your life is capital? That it is exposed to risk, and, therefore, should be insured?

Any objections, you say. Yes, but none the less a good one. Just wait a minute! Don't run away. Come, now, whose capital is it that you return to protect by insurance? Is it yours? Well, hardly, for if it were, you would be as quick to insure as you are to protecting your property that is exposed to the risk of fire.

Most likely there is a woman in this case, and it may be a child or two. If so, don't you think it is rather cowardly in you to compel them to carry the risk of loss? Come, now, be honest with yourself. You know what you are worth to your family, or, at least you ought to know, for you can secure it within two minutes. Well, then, how much would it be, in dollars, if death were to call a halt on you? Out with it, candidly.

Now, honestly, is it not asking too much of them to compel them to carry the risk of losing this sum in the event of your death? Is it right, is it manly in you to offer it? Are they not justly entitled to the protection of all life insurance offers, and if so, what is to attend to the matter but yourself?

You can argue all you will, but there is only one way to meet it, and that way is by insuring. Get the thing at once and have it off your mind. Call in surance

SILSBY'S

PIANO, ORGAN AND FURNITURE POLISH.

The attention of the public is respectfully called to the above Polish. Having been tried and thoroughly tested for several years in the Music Rooms of Mr. Silsby, it is confidently recommended as being much superior to anything else in the market. Its special points of superiority over all other polishes are as follows, viz

1st—It is perfectly harmless, and will not penetrate or injure the most delicate wood or highly polished surface.

2nd—It readily cleanses the surface and when rubbed dry forms a thin, hard coating, which we believe does not exist, equalled by durability or brilliancy of lustre.

3d—It is easily applied.

The great importance of using an ingredient that will successfully destroy the penetrating elements which are used in the various kinds of polish, cannot fail to be appreciated.

Do not fail to try a bottle. You will certainly never allow yourself to be without it after once giving it a trial!

Ask your Grocer for Silsby's Polish. PRICE 35 CENTS. The trade are requested to write for special prices by the dozen or gross.

THE LOMBARD INVESTMENT CO.

The system of placing loans by responsible Agencies on Farm and City property in the West has become so well understood and appreciated of late as to excite no little surprise when the magnitude of such investments is learned as made by Savings Banks and other careful investors.

Investigation will show that this method of loaning money, in view of its safety and the fair returns associated, has become so popular that many parties and persons are changing their investments from a very low to a more satisfactory rate of interest.

The Lombard Investment Company, of Boston, by 30 years experience, without having lost a dollar for their patrons, commend themselves to the confidence of those wishing to improve by increasing their income.

This underground has consented to act as agent for the Company named, and will explain methods and place loans when desired, without expense to the investor.

Investigating the Late Superintendent of the New Pension Building.

It is charged that when the change was made in the office of superintendent it was discovered that Dickerson had not kept any books or records of his office and business In endeavoring to ascertain the number of employes and condition of the office it was ascertained that sixteen men who were not borne on the rolls of the superintendent were ostensibly doing service under him. TRAGEDY AT LAWRENCE

A Prominent Business Man Shot and Killed in his own Office—The Result of a Business Difficulty

LAWRENCE, Mass Aug 27 Albert D Swan, one of the most prominent and wealthy manufacturers of this place was shot in the head at his office by Henry A Goodwin this morning and killed Goodwin and Swan had entered the office of the Spring manufacturing company, of which Swan was treasurer about ten o'clock, P O Box Cabinet and Swan being in the office Goodwin had been in the employ of the Molecular telephone company of which Swan was general manager, and came to his office to claim several thousand dollars which he said was due him from the company

After a brief discussion Goodwin drew a Smith & Wesson 32 calibre revolver took deliberate aim and shot Swan in the back of the head Swan rocked and fell to the floor just as the bookkeeper, alarmed by the shot entered the room Goodwin then stepped to the telephone and notified the police station to send a man to arrest him Assistant Marshal Voss drove to the Spring mill but meanwhile Goodwin had walked to the station and surrendered himself

He stated that Swan had robbed him of his invention and there was a period in his life when he could stay no more He had to shoot that point and went to the mill to kill Swan and was willing to stand the consequences Swan lived but a few minutes after the shooting

The Cause of the Trouble—Goodwin Believed to be Insane

Further developments in to-day's murder case show the difficulty between Goodwin and Swan to have been over a patent telephone switchboard invented by Goodwin Friends to both parties state that when the switchboard was invented Goodwin went to Swan for financial backing The latter gave it and a patent was applied for in the name of Henry K Goodwin, assignor of one-half interest to Albert D Swan Swan neglected to make final payment at the patent office and before a new patent could be applied for Walt & Bartlett, of New York, manufacturers of telephone instruments, applied for a patent covering the same ground

Swan had previously sent Goodwin to these parties for advice in the matter of his invention Finally the matter was adjusted by Goodwin Swan and Waltt & Bartlett taking a patent together Goodwin's friends say Swan's carelessness in not taking out the patent led to the loss of $40,000 to Goodwin, which had been offered him for his invention The switchboard, when patented, was found not to work satisfactorily and Goodwin refused to fix it and no one else could Goodwin had an idea that Swan had prevented him from getting work in various places where he tried, in order to force him to put the switch board in order

Goodwin had just made a three weeks' trip through Canada and the West in search of work, and although he is a capable electrician he could find none He came home three days ago, discouraged, and probably brooding over an imaginary wrong done by Swan, determined to kill him Swan's friends say he was the best friend Goodwin had Several times he obtained positions for him and they were apparently on the best of terms with each other, always joking and even this morning talking together pleasantly The defense will undoubtedly be insanity.

BASE BALL The Dover Observer says Many of our citizens who are interested in the National game are very anxious to see the Queen Citys, of Bangor, who have gained such a good record, and it is talked of inviting them here before long to play practice game Dearth of the Queen Citys is a Piscataquis boy, and it is believed that the club would accept an invitation to visit our villages and play a practice game with the Fearnaughts The score would probably be—well, as much as they please, to 0, but we think the trip would be enjoyable to the Queen Citys, and our citizens would be glad to welcome them. Dearth of that club receives many complimentary notices in the papers on his playing.—— On Saturday the Queen Citys play their benefit game with the M. S. C. nine, and there is no reason why it should not be an interesting and closely contested one. The question now being agitated in the minds of the Bangor base ball public is how many hits Ray will get off from the Queen Citys pitcher. The nine has given our citizens many exhibitions of fine base ball playing and our citizens should now show their appreciation of the efforts of the members of the club by liberally patronizing this game —— Next week the Queen Citys will play several games for the New England Fair people Tuesday the Skowhegan Reds a good amateur team will be the opposing nine

The Scapegoat

Miss Dora Bracondale was bending over a glass counter strewn with dainty pocket-books and card cases of every imaginable shape that fine leather and crushed velvet could be made to assume. She was a notedly pretty girl even among the host of faultlessly toileted beauties that the summer brings to Baden-Baden and strangers through the colonnade where she stood gave vent to an occasional "Voila la Belle Anglaise!" or "What a lovely face!" quite in a whisper, of course.

The object of her quest was a case to contain photograph suitable for carrying in a gentleman's pocket; the photograph being a poor reflection of her own delicate Dresden sweet face and the pocket for which it was destined was that of Mr Felix Wyatt, her betrothed love.

After much deliberation she selected a pretty little toy in white leather with a spray of forget-me-not painted on it and a beetle anatomically wrong, capering in one corner. It was lined with the palest blue satin, and was altogether an unsuitable thing to place in a man's pocket with keys, cigars and small change.

The afternoon concert on the gravel sweep before the Conversationshaus was being heralded by the usual busy of nursemaids with intensifying caps, in charge of children in the widest of sashes and deepest of embroideries, the little ones with rubber balls carried in worried knots which would occasionally burst headlong from an irascible old gentleman's backbone with little shrieks of bucksts to be filled and emptied with gravel—in and all a grand assortment among these units of humanity too overdressed to attempt more active sport. The chairs, arranged about beds and groups of tropical flowers gradually filled with an motley a collection of humanity as one could desire to see—from a ugly jaded Chinese grandee to a rugged Scotch tourist in red kerchiefs and baggy comfortable-looking coat.

Before the programme was fairly under way Miss Bracondale and her mother had joined the auditors, and at the close of the overture to Fabchard Mr Wyatt sauntered towards the book of the seating near which they were sitting.

Felix Wyatt was a happy looking well grown young fellow of twenty five or thereabouts arrayed in a tweed suit English shoes a Gangary bonnet, and with a scarab in his cravat.

"Where were you hidden that I missed you on the promenade?" he asked lounging back on the spring chair next beside the two ladies.

"I was choosing this for you, Felix," said Doris, putting the little leather case in his hand. "You will carry it everywhere with you, will you not? Promise."

"Yes I promise; and I am very much obliged to you. It's lovely—a great deal too nice for me," answered Felix looking intently at the photograph inside and the blue satin. It was the likeness of a girl with silky dark hair, beautifully arched brows, and dark eyes, large and intense, set in a face of exquisite mold.

"How long will you be away, Felix?" Mrs Bracondale asked, glancing up from her programme.

"A week at the most."

"It is provoking that you have to go just now," remarked Doris, "when the races and grand illumination are about to begin."

"It is, indeed. I always vowed my self ready to see Mr Delamere and his children safely in Paris; but I never supposed my summons would come in such haste at this time. I fancy that I wish that I had the very bottom of the sea—would I, Mr Delamere? I suppose not."

"Decidedly opposed to such wicked ideas," said Doris pouring out the coffee, which now was had in isolation placed at her elbow—and not to change the subject for, if we spoke any more of your departure, I shall make a spectacle of myself by shedding tears in the coffee."

The Winthrops by bending down upon us, and Mr Wyatt shortly afterwards, in an undertone said I will be at Frankfort if I have some little matters to attend to—visit to Mrs Ripon in the Sophienstrasse among others. I shall see you again in this evening."

On the first opportunity that offered itself Mr Wyatt took Doris the photograph from the Tooth bodyguard case that she had bestowed upon him and put it between the leaves of his pocket book intending at his first idle moment to transfer it from there to a more valuable block in the envelope in his possession. The little case he wrapped carefully in soft white paper and stowed away with a package of Christmas warm old flowers and a scarf of silks dark blue all jealously guarded by a lock at lady.

Some clear little soul, but snap proof and protected which is saying.

Mrs Bracondale's note in the Sophienstrasse for Felix Wyatt was in the nature of a distress.

"Oh Felix Felix begins, I have been in blind to my dearest darling daughter's surprise by a character of which I was unaware. But sit down—mind the cat—and I will tell you the particulars." Mrs Ripon sank back among the cushions on the sofa took a long breath and began again. "I had advertised for a good reader for Eric and for my sins I had never known anything about it. I was dressing, as I said before, and my toilet table was scattered over with jewels and trinkets, my diamonds among the rest. But I have dreamed of any of them and had the strangest shown directly to my room in the handsome high bred looking well dressed woman who presented herself before me. I could scarcely think of an applicant for the post of governess to my children, but such was the case.

A handsome governess is often a dangerous acquisition in a household, but I need not infer such a suggestion to you said Felix meditatively.

"I did not quite like her looks, though she had recommendations from people of rank and I thought I would let her know my decision by letter on the following day. At the instant I heard a little step on the street below, and thinking it sounded like Doris's voice, I ran to the window and looked out, but finding no accident had happened, I came back to find my visitor gone. She took her departure gracefully as she had entered and I was more than ever struck by her beauty. Madame de Konarski was the name on the card my maid had brought me and I mentally set her down as a Polish gentlemen's family but impoverished fortune.

"Altogether I supplied no clue to her. I should say that description of woman usually has higher aims, but how she intends to reach them I and I will be at a loss to know. I have some little matters to attend to—visit to Mrs Ripon in the Sophienstrasse among others. I shall see you again in the evening.
